Dry river threatens steelhead life cycle

BY MICHAEL BUTOWITSCH

The sight of Carmel River's hopelessly dry bottom provides dramatic evidence of the Peninsula's water shortage, but worse yet, says Richard Hughett, it means the steelhead are threatened.

When the river is flowing, steelhead regularly migrate back and forth between the ocean and San Clemente Dam where 70-75 per cent of them spawn. With the river dry, the entire life cycle of the steelhead is upset. And Hughett, as president of the Carmel River Steelhead Association, is worried.

"Last year the steelhead couldn't get in," he says, "and steelhead that came in two years ago are still in the dam." In three years, he warns, there won't be any fingerlings around.

Most of the steelhead bury their eggs around the San Clemente Dam where the parr or young steelhead spend about a year. Then, in normal times, they swim down river to the ocean where the steelhead spend two years, sometimes traveling as much as 2,000 miles, says Hughett. During this time the steelhead grow to five or six pounds, a healthy average. But land-locked fish rarely grow over half a pound, hardly a healthy specimen, laments Hughett.

The amount of silt in San Clemente Dam contributes to the steelhead's problems and may be holding back a significant amount of water, Hughett claims. Siltation eliminates the air spaces in gravel beds where steelhead bury their eggs. This only adds an obstacle to an already over-burdened fish, he says.

"They (California American Water Co.) never made public any effort to assess the feasibility of removing silt," Hughett asserts. Richard Sullivan, Cal Am's vice president, says that silt removal is too expensive for the results obtained.

The siltation problem is compounded by erosion along the river bank where riparian growth has been destroyed by either man or the weather. When the river was channelized by the Army Corps of Engineers, Hughett says, foliage was also wiped out. Add to that the effect of private developers along the river and the drought, and he says erosion is a severe problem. All wildlife is threatened by the elimination of ground cover, he says, charging that "human needs have taken precedence over wildlife."

Hughett blames the local water company for the river's condition saying it should have planned for dry seasons years ago. The combination of a drought and the fact that no additional sources of water have been developed means that all existing water goes to human consumption while the river remains dry. Every well in Carmel Valley, says Hughett, takes more away from the water table and worsens the river's condition.

Though Hughett is quick to explain that members of the steelhead association are not conservationists, they've had to assume the posture of conservationists in order to "reestablish the river." The next major project for the 50-member group is rebuilding a portion of the river by replanting willows along the banks and strategically placing boulders. The last time the association cleaned up, members hauled away over 11,000 pounds of junk, including bits and pieces of cars.

The steelhead association itself is a victim of the water shortage, suffering a 50 per cent drop in membership. The group was formed in 1974 "to solve the problems of Carmel River." At one time it had about 100 members. But now, says Hughett, fishermen go north and the continued drought takes its toll in membership.

In assessing the water shortage and its effects upon Carmel River, Hughett says, "We're going to need another source of water, possibly a dam." He's afraid that Cal Am is already diverting too much water from the river for its own good.

In fact, Hughett sees a potential solution in constructing a small dam with a pumping station at the mouth of the river. In that way, he reasons, the Peninsula could have a dam and plenty of water without endangering the river.

Sullivan says that no matter how ideal the solution sounds, it's not practical. The quality of water at the river mouth is worse, he says, than the quality at mid-valley, necessitating more iron removal. The danger of salt water intrusion further reduced the proposal's feasibility.

But, even though Hughett is worried about the river's dwindling resources and no immediate solution is in sight, he's not totally pessimistic. "It's not too late to save the river. Many rivers in worse shape have been saved." The Ventura River is a prime example, he says, of a river killed by pollution and then saved.

Still, he can't help feeling dejected. "Look at the river. That's where the disaster is. That's where the tragedy is. If we upset the ecosystem, we only upset ourselves."

Vows renewed

The vows were old, but the setting new when Lori and Don Sweiss renewed their wedding vows last week at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church with Father John McSweeney officiating.

It was the Silver wedding anniversary for the couple who wore the same wedding attire for their marriage 25 years ago at St. Giles in Oak Park, Ill.

Blue iris and white spider mums — the same colors from their early nuptials — mingled with silver leaves in the floral decor at the church where witnesses were their daughters, Sherri Sweiss and Sandi Regan. Their sons, Scott and Shawn performed the readings.

Following the mass, family and friends were invited to join the celebrants at their home for cocktails and a buffet supper. Calls came during the celebration from family and friends — including members of their first wedding party — from Chicago, Las Vegas, and Los Angeles.

The beautiful blue and white cake, inscribed, "Twenty Fifth Anniversary" was served to: Fr. McSweeney, Mmes: Lou Allaire, Don Weber, Richard Dick, JoAnne Sears, Joan Bennett, Mary Johnson, and Dolores Fearn. Also Ed Regan, Harry Baker and Messrs and Mmes. Dale Buche, Joe Nolls, John Urlins, Larry Busic, Frank Veach, Leon Chappelle, Ralph Erion, Glen Lowe, Charles Allaire, Frank Lucido, Sr., Clato Brocchimi, Eruno Merz, Dave Langdon, Leo Weber, John Angelo, Fred Horne. Also Sam Klemek and son, Sammy and Mr. and Mrs. Dean Diaz Jr. and Robert and Rene.

Congressman Panetta

Carmel Valley Congressman, Leon Panetta, was recently elected vice chairman of the New Members Caucus in Congress.

"This first election of officers for the freshmen caucus indicates a consensus to move forward with reforms of the Congress and its ethics," Panetta said.

As examples of results already obtained by freshmen Democrats during the past month Panetta mentioned the removal of Rep. Robert Sikes (D. Fla.) from his chairmanship of the Military Construction Subcommittee and the opening of the full Democratic caucus to the press and the public.

"The Sikes case showed that the freshmen class will have to be reckoned with during the upcoming discussions of ethics reform," Panetta said.

The Valleyite has also co-sponsored an effort to block a major congressional pay raise that will soon go into effect unless a vote is forced on the House floor.

"I don't believe that Congresh should be giving itself a pay raise in the first place," Panetta said. "Let's first strengthen the House ethics code, get rid of 'slush funds' and restore some public trust before we ask for any more money. The attempt to slip a $13,000 a year raise through the back door without voting on it openly is disgraceful."

Art lectures

Monday art lectures by a former art instructor for the Carmel Unified School District, Robert Skiles, have eliminated the blue from Mondays and replaced it by the myriad of colors which unfold during the series of "Asian Art" discussions led by the retired teacher turned enthusiastic traveler.

Skiles, who will be off to Japan at the end of March to complete a personal pilgrimage of 33 Buddhist shrines (he has already visited 30 of them — many isolated in mountainous terrain), hopes to take a tour group to Japan in October based on his current lecture series.

He has already lectured on Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, Sri Lanka and Bruma. Following on Feb. 14 will be Indonesia; Cambodia, Feb. 21; Thailand, Feb. 28; Nepal and Tibet, Mar. 7 and Central Asia and the Silk Route, Mar. 14. A small fee is charged by the museum for the lectures. For further information please call 372-5477.

Padres destroy Palma

by NANCY FLEMING

The undefeated Carmel High Padres have just about sewn up the M.T.A.L. title for this season. The Padres breezed past Gonzales 70-41 and Palma 81-35 last week.

The Gonzales Spartans played well, backed by Lionel Gonzales who accumulated a game high of 16 points but not well enough to overcome the Padres. Carmel's Doug Weller broke the 2-2 tie in the first quarter with a free throw which put Carmel ahead and there they stayed for the rest of the game. Gonzales was right behind the Padres 9-8 by mid-quarter until Carmel began to score from under the basket and added 20 points while the Spartans managed only four ending the first quarter 29-12.

Carmel kept its pace and outscored Gonzales 14-8 and 22-7 in the second and third periods. Both teams scored 14 in the fourth quarter to bring the final score to 70-41.

Friday night Carmel literally demolished the only team that threatened their M.T.A.L. title. The Palma High Chieftains' only loss was against Carmel three weeks ago in an exicting game that was tight until the last minutes when Carmel rallied for the 57-44 victory. The Chieftains had their chance to beat the Padres and share the M.T.A.L. title but were blown off the court in what coach Ron Critchfield described as his worst defeat since being at Palma.

The Padres came out fired up and exploded for eight points to start off the game. Doug Weller of Carmel was consistently fed perfect passes from his team mates, scoring almost all of his 21 points from under the basket. Carmel's team work made it possible for them to score on 11 of 12 shots for an astounding 92 per cent.

Carmel's defense overpowered the Chieftains forcing them to shoot from the outside. "We did just what we wanted to do on defense," Carmel Coach Joe Feldeisin explained. "We wanted to stop (Steve) Guttierez, who is averaging 15.5 in league and (Ron) Harney and (Jim) Rossi,

Up the mountain. Up. Omigosh! Don't look down. By narrow trails that switched direction back and forth the Equestrian Trials Inc. riders toiled up Blue Ridge above Los Padres dam. That is, their horses toiled. The riders visited, laughed, talked, joked, and the more daring actually lifted their eyes to the view which grew wider and grander with every step.

Every few hundred steps the line of riders was halted "to give the horses a blow." The lower rider headed west, looked up at the rider headed east on the switchback above, and kidded him, "Hey! You're going the wrong direction."

The horses dripped sweat. The long winter hairs on their necks curled. Foam plastered the long hairs between their legs. Cheeks and eyebrows darkened as if with tears. Soon most of the horses looked as if they had been in a rainstorm and ribald jokes were made about the portions of their bodies that dripped.

But one horse didn't drip sweat, didn't work up as much sweat. A fine sheen appeared along his neck. He had recently been clipped. Instead of a thick insulating winter coat, his skin glowed through short fuzz. A fine sheen of sweat appeared along his neck and flanks. At the rest stops, this light sweat almost completely disappeared by evaporation. He was an excellent example of WHY people clip horses in the winter.

Clipping isn't just for pretties, although a horse in his winter coat is rather less glorious than in summer. With winter coats, what you get is sweat and wet. This is no great hazard if you do your riding only at noon on warm days — the horse has all the sunny afternoon to dry out. If you ride after school or after work or when the sun isn't shining or when the wind is blowing, a sweaty, wet horse is a problem. If he stands around in wet hair, he's certain to catch cold. But the thick wool which has been wetted from the skin out can be rubbed with the entire stack of towels from the bathroom and still be wet. It doesn't dry easily.

Putting a blanket over the wet horse is not an entire solution. The blanket which has been waterproofed to shed rain holds the sweat in. (The classic British solution to this problem was to lay handfuls of straw on the horse's back before putting the blanket on. This allowed the air to circulate under the blanket.

Recently we visited the Midwest which has been having a record cold winter. We saw horses so furry you had to look twice to find their ears. Our California horses grow winter coats that are mere silky nothings compared to the snowbound animals.

We saw coats that a musk oxen wouldn't be ashamed of... thick, thick coats that would make a polar bear proud. Underneath all that hair was a happy healthy horse saying "Energy crisis? What's that?"

At Foxbrush Farm, a riding school near Lansing, Mich., owner Casey Hughed explained that the same winter coat which makes the horse so comfortable outside, makes him uncomfortable inside. In the indoor riding arena the school horses quickly work up a sweat during an hour lesson.

Casey explained that she has only a dozen or so box stalls, that most of the horses live happily in outside paddocks with no more shelter than a windbreak. But the wet horse can't go back outside, nor, since they live in groups and would tear each other's blankets off, can they be blanketed.

It's the kind of problem that makes a horse glad to live in California. Casey alleviates the sweat problem by clipping patches over those portions of skin which have the most sweat glands or to which the sweat would drip from other parts of the body. The patchy clip job makes the horse look funny but protects his health and comfort.

Clipping a swatch down the underside of the neck and tummy is a bare minimum. More popular is the so called "trace clip" which cuts a six-inch swath from shoulder to rear along the horse's lower sides. After some thought, we conclude it is named this not because the traces of your clippers are so easily seen but because in days of harness horses, that swath must have run right along the place where the harness traces (the pull straps) rubbed against the horse.

The blanket clip, is a popular style for horses that travel out in the countryside. It removes the winter coat on the horse's body but leaves the longhaired legs to protect the horse from tall grass and puddles. The person wielding the clippers also leaves the hair under the saddle long as stubble there would be irritated by the saddle. Then just to show how steady their hand is, the clipper wielder also often leaves long hair on the haunches in a pattern to suit the horse's owner. We've seen foxes heads, initials, hearts and intertwined hearts, team and school symbols, and quarter marks.

Show horses who have a warm box stall for cold nights get an all over clip job including their fetlocks and whiskers and the insides of ears. This clip job is not specifically for sweat. It's for the greater glory of that funny looking furry animal — the winter horse.

who are averaging about 10-11 in league." Guttieriz ended up with six, Harney four, and Rossi five points.

Both teams scored almost evenly in the second and third periods but in the fourth Carmel let loose to score 33 to Palma's six points. The Padres also had a good night at the free throw line sinking 19 of 22 to Palma's 9 of 16.

Carmel now 8-0 in league, takes on R.L.S. in Pebble Beach Tuesday.

New exhibits

TWO ARTISTS—TWO VISIONS

Works by Daniel O. Stolpe and James Raun-Byberg, both of Scotts Valley, will be on display this month in Cherry Hall at the Carl Cherry Foundation. Their works include etchings, lithographs, water colors, and painted pottery.

The opening of this exhibit will be Sunday, Feb. 13, 2 to 4:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend and meet the artists.

The exhibit will be on display Wednesday through Sunday, 2 to 4:30 p.m.

TILLIE GORT'S

Ink drawings and mobiles are part of an exhibit opening Wednesday, Feb. 16, at Tillie Gort's in Pacific Grove.

Jane Vondrak of Carmel will display her ink drawings and etchings and Anna Jane will present her "Driftmobiles."

The exhibit continues until March 15.

Dance clown due at Sunset Feb. 15

Lotte Goslar's Pantomime Circus will be performing at Sunset Center Theatre on Tuesday, Feb. 15, at 8:15 p.m.

Conceived by and starring Lotte Goslar, the show is a dance and mime theater which employs techniques developed by her from classical and modern dance forms as well as from pantomime and allied theater arts. Although it is interspersed with several serious works and pure dance numbers, the show is largely humorous.

Born in Dresden, she left Germany when Hitler rose to power. When Erika Mann's famous anti-Nazi revue, "The Peppermill," came to America, Lotte Goslar came with it.

The year 1954 saw the birth of Miss Goslar's favorite dream: The Pantomime Circus. The first edition of the show was premiered at Jacob's Pillow.

LOCAL FAVORITE, Len Dixon, is appearing this weekend at The Buckeye on Carmel Valley Road in the Village. He will be there Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 9 to 1 p.m.

TELEPHONE TIPS

My name is Jack Head. I'm the Pacific Telephone Manager for this area.

Here are more tips to help you get the most from every telephone dollar. I believe they will help you when check-writing time comes along:

1. When calling friends, neighbors or relatives in other cities or states, place the call after 5 p.m. and before 11 p.m. for low evening rates. For the lowest night rates, call after 11 p.m. and before 8 a.m., or on weekends before 5 p.m. on Sunday.
2. When you find the number you're looking for in the telephone directory, underline or circle it or jot it down in a personal phone directory. It will save you time and money the next time you need that number.
3. If you get a poor connection on a long distance call, dial the operator, who will cancel the charge for the first call.
4. If there's an error on your phone bill, call our telephone company business office and ask for an adjustment.

Symphony concert Saturday

The Carmel High School Band is sponsoring a benefit concert on Saturday, 8 p.m. at Sunset Center. The Symphony Orchestra from California State University at Long Beach will present music by Wagner, Rorem, Copland and Brahms.

Hans Lampl, conductor for the group has been with them since the fall of 1972. He was until recently the music director and conductor of the Compton Civic Symphony, which under his tenure came to be considered one of the finest community orchestras in Southern California.

Having received his early training in violin, piano and theory in his native Vienna, he later attended the University of Southern California, where he was the first candidate to receive a Doctor of Musical Arts degree with a major in conducting. His conducting teachers were among others, William Schaefer, Fritz Zweig and Ingolf Dahl. Currently the Music Director and conductor of the Rio Hondo Symphony Orchestra, he has in addition, been active as guest conductor as well as conductor and lecturer.

The Symphony Orchestra at California State University at Long Beach aims to fulfill a number of functions; to provide training and stimulus for aspiring professional musicians and music teachers; to permit qualified students of the university, for whom music is an avocation, to continue to cultivate their skill and to enjoy the pleasures of ensemble performance; to present fine symphonic fare to the university community and — through occasional off-campus concerts and tour — to reach audiences beyond the campus, preferably in schools and areas not regularly served by symphony orchestras.

Its programs are chosen with the view toward providing the orchestra members and audiences with a wide and varied repertoire ranging from Baroque to contemporary and avantgarde music. Standard works are not neglected, however, so that each student during his residence at CSULB may become thoroughly acquainted with the styles and interpretation of music of all periods. Orchestra members who wish to gain additional experience may participate in performances of oratorios and other great works from the choral literature, as well as opera and musical comedy productions mounted each semester under the auspices of the CSULB Music Theatre Program.

Donations to the Band trip benefit for the Saturday night performance are $2 for adults and $1 for students. Tickets may be purchased at Sunset Center.

Little League sign-ups

Boys and girls interested in joining a Carmel Valley Little League team are asked to bring their birth certificate and a parent to the sign-ups for the 1977 baseball season next week. Carmelo Library on Tuesday, Feb. 15 from 7 until 9 or the Tularcitos multipurpose room on Thursday, Feb. 17 is where you will find officials from the Valley League waiting to answer your questions.

Registration fees are $7 per player or a $5 family fee for three or more children.

Adult volunteers will also be welcomed or those wishing to assist, but unable to make the sign-up dates are invited to call League president, Jack Garrett, 624-5976.

St. Philip's meeting

The annual meeting and potluck held recently at St. Philip's Lutheran Church named Barbara Battcher, Kenneth Bullock and Wayne Moore to the Council.

Council officers installed during the following Sunday's service were: George French, president; Eldon Kunz, vice president; Barbara Battcher, secretary; Doris Moore, treasurer; Kenneth Bullock, parish education and financial secretary; Wayne Moore and Eldon Kunz, property and grounds; and George French, evangelism and worship.

Appreciation was expressed for their three years of service to retiring council members; John Long, Glenn Williams and Lowell Battcher.

Child abuse clinic set

The Child Abuse Prevention Council will present a comprehensive look at the social, psychological and legal aspects of child abuse in relation to the community at its second annual conference Friday and Saturday, Feb. 25 and 26, at Monterey Peninsula College.

"Voices for Youth," opens with registration Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Lecture Forum 103 and a keynote talk by a child specialist, Dr. Albert J. Solnit, on "Child Advocacy: What, Why, How?" Dr. Solnit is Stirling professor of pediatrics and psychiatry at Yale University School of Medicine and director of the Yale University Child Study Center. He co-authored "Beyond the Best Interests of the Child" with Anna Freud and Joseph Goldstein. Peggy Young will welcome conference participants.

The conference will continue all-day Saturday in LF-103 on the MPC campus starting with registration and coffee at 8:30 a.m. Betty Lansdown, coordinator for Parents Anonymous and experiential consultant, will be the speaker at the 9 a.m. session, according to Judy Duff of the Child Abuse Prevention Council.

Some 22 informative and experiential workshops featuring specialized persons from a variety of community resources will be held in four morning and afternoon sessions. Small group topics include Family Bonding; Children's Rights; Building Self-Esteem; Sexual Abuse; Children's TV; Mother's Day is Over; Violence Against Children; Exceptional Children; Help for the Single Parent Family; Coping Skills; La Casa de Madres; Addicts and Alcoholic Teenagers in Monterey; What Happens After the Report is Made; Sports and Child Abuse; A Workshop for People Working with People; Youth and the Law; Parents Anonymous; Foster Care; Neglect; Family Court and Survival Skills for Teenagers.

Films will run continuously throughout the day.

The two day conference is being co-sponsored by the Child Abuse Prevention Council, MPC and the Junior League of Monterey County. Conference participation is limited to 300 persons. The conference materials fee is $5 and registration should be completed by Feb. 21. For further information contact Judy Duff of the Child Abuse Prevention Council, 372-5414 or Dr. Bea Siegel at MPC, 649-1150, ext. 451.
